

Blaming the environment for their problem, the Baron Waste and his unwilling sidekick Squeedunks, launch a full scale attack on earth. Exiled from another dimension because of selfish, greedy, and destructive ways, the Baron first finds himself on Earth during the last days of environmental destruction caused by massive meteor strike.

The planet can no longer support life and the huge dinosaurs are dying everywhere. During a close encounter with the last of the ferocious beasts, in a fight to finish it off, the Baron is almost killed himself. The beast's mighty roar is burned into the Baron and Squeedunks' memories forever.

While languishing for eons in the now desolate and barren wasteland that was once Earth, with no one to bully or rule but Squeedunks, the Baron plots the return to their home destination. Once back home, his old habits re-emerge with a vengeance and they are both cast back to Earth, where his peers believe, he can do no harm.

Instead of finding a desolate, barren wasteland, a thriving population just entering an industrial age awaits them. Using his talent for deception and ability to change shape, the Baron embarks on a campaign to destroy the now beautiful and prospering Earth. This is the perfect life for this nasty pair of evil-doers, now engaged in convincing people it is perfectly normal to litter, deplete valuable resources and pollute the air, rivers and oceans. Realizing he has found the perfect recruits to help implement his schemes, the Baron spends many years taking advantage of what he believes are those people's natural tendency for waste and destruction. Happiness overwhelms both he and Squeedunks – they are finally winning the war.

Late in the 20th century, a sudden and violent earthquake changes the Baron's and Earth's destiny forever. In a suburban California town, four young cave explorers make the discovery of a lifetime. These environmentally-hip children have discovered a talking dinosaur. Not just any ordinary talking dinosaur, but a Thesaurus Rex, named Littlenow, which everyone knows, is the smartest in the world. This fabulous little treasure introduces the kids to a world of wonder. The remarkable network of caves in which he lives are filled with the complete history of mankind. Not only that, but much to the foursomes amazement, this little dinosaur's best friends (a bear and an eagle) also talk. The four friends decide this is too good to be true and decide to keep it a secret. But as secrets go, this one will get told, too. As the children delight in the new caves and learn how these animals came to their town, some amazing events occur.

While our little group is exploring the caves one afternoon, a sinister and frightening force enters the lives of the new-found friends. Deep within the ground, a cold forceful wind churns up dust and smoke, trapping the explorers and Littlenow. Their escape is nothing short of a miraculous and leaves them all scared and worried about what could happen next. With the appearance of this sinister force, Littlenow tells the group the chilling story from his past.

After the experience in the caves and hearing Littlenow's story, the kids convince the little dinosaur to take refuge in their home. The next few days prove to be hilarious and eventful as the parents get involved. The entire group congregates to hear how Littlenow got his now, and learn of Cubbacius B. Bear and Athena Eagle's activities in the wildlife preserve near the caves.

The kids are amazed how sympathetic their parents are to the plight of the three creatures. With everyone working together, they devise a plan to find out just what his evil force is that has suddenly appeared in Littlenow's caves.

Athena tells the group of the rumors on the wind about terrible and unusual events happening to people and animals all over the world.

Plans are made for an organized search of the caves located under the old landfill. The parents research all the rumors they have heard, and the kids organize a club to help, and learn from other kids around the world. But things seem to be getting worse. After a terrifying ordeal at the children's home, involving poor Little Now and the Baron Waste, which leaves the house in shambles, everyone decides its time to take action.

Little Now, Cubbacius, and Athena leave the safe haven of their new friends and set out to discover what is happening to the other animals and sound the alarm about the Baron Waste. Meanwhile, the kids unite their efforts to help find the Baron Waste and clean up his mess.

The Adventure Continues . . .

When Little Now, Cubbacius and Athena meet Sibille the Kemp's Ridley Sea Turtle in "A Sea-Weedy Kind of a Deal," it will be another action packed adventure with the Baron Waste and Squeedunks.